Some lawmakers are donating their checks to charity, but four out of five are happily pocketing theirs. Hightower Lowdown February 2012 requires tending to roads, bridges, rail systems, airports, school buildings, parks, internet access. The billionaire's antipathy is not directed at us as individuals, but as users of publicly provided services -- such as schools, parks, health care, buses, collective bargaining, libraries and environmental protections.

And loud. Susan DeMarco was also a co-host of the program and continues to work. Most damnable of all has been his masquerading as a golden-haired billionaire "populist" who's standing up for America's hard-hit middle class against Wall Street, corporate lobbyists and moneyed elites -- a carefully crafted PR pose that has duped many working stiffs into thinking he is their champion. Entire 8s.

Sometimes, the outrages of seriously stupid policies are best met with ridicule. course, impoverished locals can't live or golf there, but the developers who got government subsidies for the project are hoping that Chicago weekenders will make the two-hour trek to the place.
